

State and Society in Eighteenth-Century France

STEPHEN MILLER

State and Society in Eighteenth-Century France

A STUDY OF POLITICAL POWER AND

SOCIAL REVOLUTION IN

LANGUEDOC

*The Catholic University of America Press
Washington, D.C.*

Copyright © 2008
The Catholic University of America Press
All rights reserved

The paper used in this publication meets the minimum requirements of American National Standards for Information Science—Permanence of Paper for Printed Library Materials, ANSI Z39.48-1984.

∞

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS CATALOGING-IN-PUBLICATION DATA

Miller, Stephen Jacobus, 1968–

State and society in eighteenth-century France : a study of political power and social revolution in Languedoc / Stephen Miller.

p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 978-0-8132-1517-4 (cloth : alk. paper) 1. Languedoc (France)—
History—18th century. 2. Languedoc (France)—Politics and government—
18th century. 3. Languedoc (France)—Social conditions. 4. Nobility—
France—Languedoc—History—18th century. I. Title.

DC6H.L319M55 2008

944'.8034—dc22

2007030354

Contents

List of Tables and Illustrations	vii
Acknowledgments	ix
Abbreviations	xi
Introduction	I
I. Peasant Economy, the Seigneurial Regime, and the State	23
Landowners, Market Opportunities, and Relations of Production	25
Seigneurial Levies and the Royal Judiciary	41
The Royal Judiciary and the Authority and Honor of the Seigneurs	47
2. The Rewards of Royal Service	57
The Royal Judiciary: The Police of Hierarchy and Rank	58
Tax Farms: The Provincial Fountains of Wealth	66
The Estates of Languedoc: The Apex of Provincial Patronage	83
3. Crown and Nobility in a Time of Financial Difficulties	101
State Finances and the Royal Chain of Command in the 1770s and 1780s	105
The Central Administration, the Estates, and the Seigneurial Regime	108
Royal Policy toward Town Governments and Fiscal Administrations	117
The Locus of Power: The King or the Provincial Nobles?	133

Contents

4. Revolutionary Politics, 1788–1791	141
The Nobility and the Bourgeoisie: Common Projects and Divergent Perspectives	144
The Toulousain and Albigeois after July 1789	153
Nîmes, the Southern Massif Central, and Montpellier after July 1789	161
5. The Revolutionary Dynamic, 1789–1793	175
The Eighteenth-Century Economy: Growth without Development	177
Popular Uprisings amid Grain Shortages and the Collapse of Royal Authority	188
Social Strife over the Establishment of the New Regime	190
The Seigneurial Regime, Peasant Revolts, and Counterrevolution	203
6. Radicalism, Terror, and Repression, 1792–1799	217
The Challenges of Political Representation and Democracy	219
Revolutionary Policies and Personalities	231
Thermidor	244
Making Sense of the Sans Culottes' Year in Power	248
Conclusion	253
Appendix	273
Bibliography	285
Index	311

Tables and Illustrations

TABLES

1-1.	Seigneurial Levies in Languedoc	43
1-2.	Judicial Rulings Favorable to Seigneurs 1750-1789	47
1-3.	Rulings of the Parlement of Toulouse Enforcing Seigneurial Rights	52
2-1.	Gages of Associations of Officeholders	59
2-2.	Fees Collected by Associations of Officeholders	59
2-3.	Average Direct Tax Paid by Inhabitants in Various Parts of Languedoc	70
2-4.	Revenue Distributed in Conjunction with the Annual Meeting of the Estates of Languedoc	93
4-1.	Municipal Council of Toulouse, February 1790	158
4-2.	Capitation of Albi, 1787	159
4-3.	Capitation of Montpellier, 1789	169
6-1.	Arrests in the Gard in 1793 and the Year II, by Social and Professional Group	242
6-2.	Executions in the Gard during the Terror, by Profession	243
6-3.	Members of the Municipal Council of Montpellier, by Social and Professional Group	245
6-4.	Members of the Municipal Council of Toulouse, by Social and Professional Group	246
A-1.	Recipients of 5,347,859 Livres Reimbursed by the Estates of Languedoc in 1786 for Loans Taken out for the King Every Year since 1775	276

Tables and Illustrations

A-2.	Creditors of the Diocese of Montpellier	277
A-3.	Creditors of the Diocese of Toulouse, 1787 and 1788	278
A-4.	Classification of Professions for Five Languedocien Villages	279
A-5.	Peasant Revolts in the Departments of Old Regime Languedoc	280

ILLUSTRATIONS

1-1.	Jurisdiction of the Parlement of Toulouse. Reprinted by permission of Flammarion.	28
1-2.	Civil Dioceses of Languedoc before 1789. Reprinted by permission of Flammarion.	29
2-1.	Portrait of Laurent-Nicolas de Joubert. Reprinted by permission of the J. Paul Getty Museum, Los Angeles.	81
2-2.	La Promenade de Peyrou, Montpellier. Photo taken by Johane Gervais.	86
2-3.	The Arena, Interior, Nîmes. Library of Congress Prints and Photographs Division, Washington, D.C. 20540, USA.	86
4-1.	The Departments of the Former Province of Languedoc. Reprinted by permission of the Centre Départemental de Documentation Pédagogique du Tarn.	154
5-1.	Dowries of the Smallholders, Agricultural Laborers, Artisans, and Shepherds of the Narbonnais and Corbières in the Eighteenth Century	181
5-2.	Assertions of Seignorial Rights in Old Regime Languedoc, by Department	209

Acknowledgments

MANY FRIENDS, COLLEAGUES, AND ORGANIZATIONS provided me with invaluable help in preparing this manuscript for publication. First and foremost, I would like to thank my advisor Edward Berenson. He inspired me to take on a project about the French Revolution, and his intellect and scholarship led me toward many original topics of investigation. Berenson guided me through graduate school and helped me to obtain grants for research. He encouraged my writing when it merited praise and called me back into line when it was deficient. I am sincerely grateful for his assistance. Other members of the faculty at UCLA who provided intellectual inspiration and guidance include Robert Brenner and Perry Anderson. I am lucky to have taken seminars with these two outstanding scholars. Over the years, every time I have had a conversation with Brenner, I have come away with ideas on how to improve my manuscript.

In addition to these scholars, several others provided critical and useful comments on my research and writing. Gilles Postel-Vinay read first drafts as I wrote them in Paris. Lynn Hunt evaluated many of the chapters and taught me an intellectual rigor I had not known before that time. Rafe Blaufarb, Carolyn Eichner, Sharon Kettering, David Miller, David Parker, and Mark Potter also read parts of the manuscript and gave me encouraging critical comments.

Anonymous readers at the Catholic University of America Press showed me the parts of my arguments that needed improvement before publication. The preparation of articles for French Historical

Acknowledgments

Studies, the Journal of Social History, and European History Quarterly forced me to sort out ideas about early modern France and the Revolution. The anonymous readers of French Historical Studies were particularly helpful in getting me to think through the nature of the absolute monarchy of France.

This book also benefited from conversations with many scholars over the years. Gopal Balakrishnan, William Beik, Antoine Colin, Jeffrey Houghtby, Thomas Mertes, and Philip Minehan provided me with new perspectives on the history of eighteenth-century France. Michael Fitzsimmons and Colin Jones both gave me much to think about when I presented the ideas from one of the chapters at the conference of the Western Society for French History in Lubbock, Texas, in 2004. Bill Olejniczak pointed me toward some important sources on French economic history at the conference of the Consortium on Revolutionary Europe at High Point, North Carolina, in 2004.

The Fulbright Program, the Department of History of the University of California, Los Angeles, and the Faculty Development Program of the University of Alabama at Birmingham all provided generous financial support, allowing me to spend two and a half years researching and writing this book in Paris, Toulouse, Nîmes, Albi, Carcassonne, and Montpellier.

Many librarians and archivists have assisted me in locating research material. All of the staff of the Sterne Library at the University of Alabama at Birmingham helped me resolve myriad questions about research and writing. The librarian who provided the most help is Sterne Library's Eddie Luster. He tracked down hundreds of little known secondary works and primary sources that form a major part of this book.

Finally, I would like to thank John Coley, Colin Davis, Harriet Amos Doss, Katia Kiss-Miller, John Lee, Joan Miller, Raymond Mohl, and all of my colleagues in the Department of History of the University of Alabama at Birmingham. All of these friends provided intellectual and moral support as this book unfolded.

Abbreviations

Archives Départementales de l'Aude: ADA

Archives Départementales du Gard: ADG

Archives Départementales de l'Hérault: ADH

Archives Départementales de la Haute-Garonne: ADHG

Archives Départementales du Tarn: ADT

Archives Municipales de Toulouse: AMT

Archives Nationales de France: AN

Bibliothèque Nationale de France: BN

State and Society in Eighteenth-Century France